

Siladitya Bhattacharya

Siladitya Bhattacharya is a Professor and the Head of the School of Medicine, Medical Sciences, and Nutrition at the University of Aberdeen, where he has also assumed significant leadership responsibilities, notably serving as the Director of the University's Institute of Applied Health Sciences. His primary research interests lie in reproductive epidemiology and the evaluation of interventions in reproductive medicine, with a particular focus on infertility. Professor Bhattacharya is the Chief Investigator for a portfolio of reproductive health trials and serves on several national and international committees related to reproductive medicine. He has contributed extensively to reproductive medicine, boasting an h-index of 66 with over 277 co-authored publications. His previous affiliations include the University of Milan and Cardiff University.